The first of its kind in the area, the Little Sable Point Lighthouse and its residents have been a symbol of Michigan's rich maritime heritage since its completion in 1865. The lighthouse stands as a testament to the importance of safe navigation along Michigan's coastlines and continues to serve as a source of inspiration for visitors and residents alike.

Built in 1865, the Lighthouse Point Light is a spiral iron tower that rises 100 feet above the water, guiding ships along the dangerous shores of Lake Michigan. Its bright red color and white lantern make it an easily identifiable landmark for sailors and boaters alike.

The lighthouse was originally equipped with a third-order Fresnel lens, which was later replaced by a more powerful fourth-order lens in 1905. Today, the Lighthouse Point Light is still an active aid to navigation, operating 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

In addition to its navigational significance, the Lighthouse Point Light is also a popular destination for visitors. The site offers a beautiful view of the surrounding lakes and forests, as well as a chance to explore the historic buildings and exhibits that tell the story of the lighthouse and its keepers.

Come visit the Lighthouse Point Light and experience a piece of Michigan's rich maritime history for yourself!
